In 1963 Edward Ruscha published his seminal book '26 Gasoline Stations'.

My collection is an homage to Ruscha's work, and follows the same 'un-style' approach. It is distinctly 'photographer-less'. I thought about having all my images black and white, like Ruscha's, but decided that would be manipulation and not keeping to the un-style of Ruscha's work.

The petrol stations, some still operating, some closed down, were all captured as I drove around areas close to Adelaide.
